What we collect. You may visit this web site and learn about SOLV anonymously. The data that we regularly collect about visitors to our site (e.g., browser type, pages accessed, duration of visit, etc.) does not enable us to identify you. We also collect your IP address, but this information generally does not directly reveal your identity. Your IP address merely reveals the name of your access provider or company network. We collect personally identifiable information about you only if you voluntarily provide your e-mail address to us by registering for our newsletter or when you request further information from us.

How we use it. If you choose to provide us with your e-mail address or other (indirect) personally identifiable information, we will only use such information to send you our newsletter or to respond to your inquiry. When you unsubscribe from our newsletter your e-mail address will be deleted from our files. If, in the future, we undergo any sort of corporate reorganization, we may need to transfer your personally identifiable information to the surviving entity. We will also disclose your personally identifiable information if we reasonably believe we are required to do so by law, regulation or other government authority. Notwithstanding the foregoing, we will never submit your personally identifiable information to third parties for whatever purpose, including but not limited to direct marketing purposes.

Google Analytics uses "cookies", which are text files placed on your computer, to help SOLV analyze how users use the site. The information generated by the cookie about your use of the website (including your IP address) will be transmitted to and stored by Google on servers in the United States. Google will use this information for the purpose of evaluating your use of the website, compiling reports on website activity for SOLV and providing other services relating to website activity and internet usage. Google may also transfer this information to third parties where required to do so by law, or where such third parties process the information on Google's behalf. Google will not associate your IP address with any other data held by Google. Google and all its subsidiaries, such as Google Analytics, abide by the Safe Harbor privacy principles and are affiliated with the Safe Harbor program of the US Ministry of Trade.
